Librarians In The News!

Lori Komlos, Library Technology Teacher at Highland Park Elementary, was interviewed recently by Nadine Wimmer of KSL News.

Lori spoke about the shift in the role of the library technology teacher. Just the name change indicates the evolution of the career. It's not just about the Dewey Decimal System and storytime. Computers, handheld devices, and Web 2.0 tools have demanded that library technology teachers be the leaders in technology at their schools. They must keep up so they can steer students and teachers towards the right resources.

Public School Librarians: A Crucial Role in Education— by Michael Chipman (12.20.2010)

In an interview with KUER. Salt Lake City School District librarians, Tim Rausch (Beacon Heights) and Susette Evans (Northstar) and Georgia Loutenstock (Utah State Office of Education's Teaching and Learning Department) talked about what an exciting and challenging role the library technology teacher plays in our schools.

What is the Digital Media Service?

UEN's Digital Media Service is a digital media repository filled with video and other educational media free for Utah's educators, students and citizen learners. The Digital Media Service allows you to search for content, preview it and then download the media for on demand use.

The digital repository includes: videos licensed by the Utah Instructional Media Consortium, local programs from KUED-7, National PBS programs, as well as media from other trusted education partners. Visit emedia at <http://www.uen.org/dms/>
